Sparkle and shade of Dubai. Simple in human scale, yet unexampled in exaggerated size. The monumentality of the architecture is not visible from miles, yet it is still present through the sheer mass of elements.

The building sinks into the earth and history of the country by an incision into the landscape, forming a place of shelter distant from the commerce driven pace of 21st century Dubai. From this basin emerges the enormous network of steel, providing shade to those seeking peace by the water. The scale and power of this superstructure point toward the future, while the light filtered ambient revives the atmosphere of traditional souks.
